

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a method of producing novel improved protein mutant which produce low allergenic response in humans compared to the parent of that mutant. Specifically, the present invention comprises neutralizing or 5 reducing the allergenicity of a protein by introducing therein as replacement or modification of an epitope on such protein a sequence from human subtilisin.